

Vera's Latin America: PANAMA

No one knows Latin America more than Vera Jimenez! The Los Angeles based TV personality was born in Michoacán, Mexico, and has traveled extensively from Panama to Argentina to Uruguay. She's a Golden State triple threat: a TV celebrity, expert meteorologist and established restaurateur.

Now Vera takes you to the heart of the continent that makes her heart skip a beat in a colorful new series, VERA'S LATIN AMERICA.

Vera's first stop on her journey through Latin America – PANAMA!

There's more to the Central American nation of Panama than just being home to the world-famous Panama Canal. Vera takes us to Panama City for a traditional family breakfast... across the country to a coffee plantation on a UNESCO Heritage Site where they grow the world's most-expensive beans... and visits a hydroponic garden at the edge of the country to create farm-to-table recipes with chef Charli Collins, known as the Ambassador of Panama's cuisine. Vera even makes time to traverse the Gamboa Rain Forest Reserve to say hello to some rescue sloths!

Viewers won't want to miss a moment of this 12-episode series that will capture your corazon in VERA'S LATIN AMERICA.
